AAS, ENGL 496-10 Contemporary Black Poetics 43297 4 credits

This course examines various modes of Black American poetic production in the 21st century, including: “traditional” written poetry, spoken word poetry and rap music. Critical approaches to the Black poetic tradition are informed by theories developed by Evie Shockley in Renegade Poetics, Michelle Wright in Physics of Blackness, and other scholars/thinkers engaging these poetic forms. Shockley poses a question central to this course: “what evidence is there in the text, if any, of the African American writer’s wrangling with competing expectations or desires for whether and how race will function in her work?” This course seeks to critically engage this question through the work of a wide range of poets, including: Harryette Mullen, Elizabeth Alexander, Tim Seibles, Shara McCallum, Kendrick Lamar and many others. Graduate students will be expected to present throughout the term and will have to research and write a professional conference paper on Black poetics. Professor Peterson  M, 4:10 - 7:00 p.m.
